Jesus' Defeat of Death Peter G. Bolt, 2003-12-11 Peter Bolt explores the impact of Mark s Gospel on its early readers in the first century Graeco Roman world His book focuses upon the thirteen characters in Mark who come to Jesus for healing or exorcism and using analytical tools of narrative and reader response criticism explores their crucial role in the communication of the Gospel Bolt suggests that early readers of Mark would be persuaded that Jesus dealings with the suppliants show him casting back the shadow of death and that this in itself is preparatory for Jesus final defeat of death in resurrection Enlisting a variety of ancient literary and non literary sources in an attempt to illuminate this first century world this book gives special attention to illness magic and the Roman imperial system This is a different approach to Mark which attempts to break the impasse between narrative and historical studies and will appeal to scholars and students alike

Porphyry: On Abstinence from Killing Animals , 2014-04-10 Porphyry s On Abstinence from Killing Animals is one of the most interesting books from Greek antiquity for both philosophers and historians In it Porphyry relates the arguments for eating or sacrificing animals and then goes on to argue that an understanding of humans and gods shows such sacrifice to be inappropriate that an understanding of animals shows it to be unjust and that a knowledge of non Greeks shows it to be unnecessary There are no Neoplatonist commentaries on Aristotle s Ethics from the period AD 250 600 Thus although this work is not a commentary on Aristotle it fills a gap in this series by going to the heart of ethical debates among Neoplatonists around AD 300 and revealing one ascetic Neoplatonist s view of the ideal way of life It also records rival positions taken on the treatment of animals by Greek philosophers over the previous six hundred years

Facing Death James Warren, 2004-06-17 The ancient philosophical school of Epicureanism tried to argue that death is nothing to us Were they right James Warren provides a comprehensive study and articulation of the interlocking arguments against the fear of death found not only in the writings of Epicurus himself but also in Lucretius poem De rerum natura and in Philodemus work De morte These arguments are central to the Epicurean project of providing ataraxia freedom from anxiety and therefore central to an understanding of Epicureanism as a whole They also offer significant resources for modern discussions of the value of death one which stands at the intersection of metaphysics and ethics If death is the end of the subject and the subject can not be benefited nor harmed after death is it reasonable nevertheless to fear the ceasing to be If the Epicureans are not right to claim that the dead can neither be benefited nor harmed what alternative models might be offered for understanding the harm done by death and do these alternatives suffer from any further difficulties The discussion involves consideration of both ethical and metaphysical topics since it requires analysis not only of the nature of a good life but also the nature of personal identity and time A number of modern philosophers have offered criticisms or defences of the Epicureans views Warren explores and evaluates these in the light of a systematic and detailed study of the precise form and intention of the Epicureans original arguments Warren argues that the Epicureans also were interested in showing that mortality is not to be regretted and that premature death is not to be feared Their arguments for these conclusions are to be found in their positive conception of the nature of a good and complete life which divorce the completeness of a life as far as possible from considerations of its duration Later chapters investigate the nature of a life lived without the fear of death and pose serious problems for the Epicureans being able to allow any concern for the post mortem future and being able to offer a positive reason for prolonging a life which is already complete in their terms
