Clark, 1983 German Ruth Sanders, 2010-06-21 Thousands of years ago seafront clans in Denmark began speaking the earliest form of Germanic language the first of six signal events that Ruth Sanders highlights in this marvelous history of the German language Blending linguistic anthropological and historical research Sanders presents a brilliant biography of the language as it evolved across the millennia She sheds light on the influence of such events as the bloody three day Battle of Kalkriese which permanently halted the incursion of both the Romans and the Latin language into northern Europe and the publication of Martin Luther's German Bible translation a People's Bible which in effect forged from a dozen spoken dialects a single German language The narrative ranges through the turbulent Middle Ages the spread of the printing press the formation of the nineteenth century German Empire which united the German speaking territories north of the Alps and Germany's twentieth century military and cultural horrors The book also covers topics such as the Gothic language now extinct the vast expansion of Germanic tribes during the Roman era the role of the Vikings in spreading the Norse language the branching off of Yiddish the lasting impact of the Thirty Years War on the German psyche the revolution of 1848 and much more Ranging from prehistoric times to modern post war Germany this engaging volume offers a fascinating account of the evolution of a major European language as well as a unique look at the history of the German people It will appeal to everyone interested in German language culture or history

Outline for Textbook Project for Introductory Survey Course in World History to 1500. The Innovative Mind in History, to 1500 Irmtraud Eve Burianek, 2017-10-02 Project Report from the year 2016 in the subject World History General and Comparison grade language English abstract The proposed project is an anthology of readings suited for a college introductory survey course in world history to 1500 The anthology will be built around the theme of the innovative mind in history The anthology will look at examples of significant innovations inventions new ideas and new technology from prehistory to 1500 The author seeks to bring fresh new ideas and interpretations of the often routine taught survey of ancient and medieval history The introduction will present the theme of the innovative mind define the term and discuss the methodology as well as the learning objectives The author wants to select from each major civilization in the world defining examples of innovation or advances in thinking For each example the author will provide scholarly articles excerpts from books images diagrams to study and questions to lead discussions or for reflection The rationale for this project is based upon author's years of experience in the college classroom as well as online teaching She has observed that students attentions are captured when explaining how a certain technology was developed or how certain modes of thought familiar today originated in history In this way students saw a connection between the past and present Their interest is stimulated Students are especially interested when they recognize the connection of new ideas in antiquity and the Middle Ages throughout times and to their own present Furthermore the author has seen that subjects such as these are inadequately discussed in textbooks and not often covered in companion readers The author also observed that more college students are entering into the so called STEM Science Technology Engineering and Mathematics fields Examples from history of advances in scientific thinking theorizing and of practical application will appeal especially to these students It can be predicted that this anthology will fill a need in the curriculum and college instructors will want to adopt it for their survey classes
