Learning from our

South Sudanese

Patients

There is a lot to be learned from our South Sudanese patients. They have a unique perspective on health and illness. They have a deep understanding of their own culture and traditions. They have a strong sense of community and family. They have a resilient spirit. They have a lot to teach us about health and illness. We need to listen to them. We need to learn from them. We need to work with them. We need to respect them. We need to value them. We need to care for them. We need to love them. We need to be like them. We need to be South Sudanese. We need to be human.
