

Queuing Theory

Each of us has spent a great deal of time waiting in lines. In this chapter, we develop mathematical models for waiting lines, or queues. In Section 20.1, we begin by discussing some terminology that is often used to describe queues. In Section 20.2, we look at some distributions (the exponential and the Erlang distributions) that are needed to describe queuing models. In Section 20.3, we introduce the idea of a birth-death process, which is basic to many queuing models involving the exponential distribution. The remainder of the chapter examines several models of queuing systems that can be used to answer questions like the following:

- 1 What fraction of the time is each server idle?
- 2 What is the expected number of customers present in the queue?
- 3 What is the expected time that a customer spends in the queue?
- 4 What is the probability distribution of the number of customers present in the queue?
- 5 What is the probability distribution of a customer's waiting time?
- 6 If a bank manager wants to ensure that only 1% of all customers will have to wait more than 5 minutes for a teller, how many tellers should be employed?

20.1 Some Queuing Terminology

To describe a queuing system, an input process and an output process must be specified. Some examples of input and output processes are given in Table 1.

The Input or Arrival Process

The input process is usually called the arrival process. Arrivals are called customers. In all models that we will discuss, we assume that no more than one arrival can occur at a given instant. For a case like a restaurant, this is a very unrealistic assumption. If more than one arrival can occur at a given instant, we say that bulk arrivals are allowed.

Usually, we assume that the arrival process is unaffected by the number of customers present in the system. In the context of a bank, this would imply that whether there are 500 or 5 people at the bank, the process governing arrivals remains unchanged.

There are two common situations in which the arrival process may depend on the number of customers present. The first occurs when arrivals are drawn from a small population. Suppose that there are only four ships in a naval shipyard. If all four ships are being repaired, then no ship can break down in the near future. On the other hand, if all four ships are at sea, a breakdown has a relatively high probability of occurring in the near
