The Centrelink Experiment John Halligan, Jules Wills, 2008-12-01 Centrelink was established in 1997 as part of the Howard government s bold experiment in re framing social policy and re shaping service delivery Centrelink was the embodiment of a key tenet of the Howard vision for public service a specialised service delivery provider agency separated from the policy functions of the purchaser Carved out of a monolithic Department of Social Security Centrelink was established along business lines operating 320 service centres and delivering payments to 10 million Australians Although enjoying monopoly provider status the organisation was required to deliver services to many different clients on behalf of its purchasing departments up to 25 in total under the terms of quasi contractual service agreements It was meant to demonstrate a greater level of both transparency and accountability for the administration of payments amounting to over 60 billion of Commonwealth expenditure For many years there was a real buzz around the Centrelink experiment and staff and clients were generally enthusiastic about the transformation However after around eight years the experiment was reined in and Centrelink was placed under closer ministerial direction and under a new managing department The experiment continues but its trajectory reflects the different pressures impacting on such dedicated services delivery agencies John Halligan Professor of Government at the University of Canberra is a foremost Australian expert on public sector governance and has published extensively on the evolution form and behaviour of the public sectors in Australia
