

A historical painting depicting the labor-intensive process of harvesting sugar cane on a plantation. In the foreground, several men, likely of African descent, are shown working with long-handled tools to cut and clear the cane stalks. They are dressed in simple, light-colored shirts and trousers, with some wearing red head coverings. The background features a large, multi-story wooden building, possibly a mill or warehouse, with a horse-drawn cart visible near its base. The overall scene is set in a tropical environment, with lush vegetation and a warm, golden light suggesting a late afternoon or early morning setting. The painting is rendered in a style that is both detailed and somewhat somber, capturing the harsh conditions of plantation life.
