

Intro and DORA

World War One was the first modern war; involved civilians as much as soldiers; this type of war is total war

Aug '14 DORA gave gov extensive powers over arms factories, control of the press/information, civil liberties etc.

Passed by Liberals; 1st time the gov intervened in people's lives and went against the Liberal policy of individualism.

The Act forbade to:

- Talk about military matters in public places
- Give bread to horses or chickens
- Trespass on railway lines or bridges
- Buy brandy or whiskey in a railway refreshment room
- Use invisible ink when writing abroad

In addition, the DORA gave the government the power to...

- take over any factory or workshop (efficient reappropriation for military needs)
- take over any land it wanted to
- censor newspapers

As the war continued and evolved, the government introduced more acts to DORA...

British Summer Time was introduced

One unpopular gov intervention was its interference with drinking habits; much absenteeism from work cuz of liquor 1915: opening hours of pubs restricted; beer made weaker and more expensive; most changes ended with the war

This was done not only to decrease alcoholism, but to increase work efficiency

The Army, Volunteering and Conscription

Armed forces in no condition to fight in '14; the navy was traditionally Britain's guardian, but the war would be on land
BEF was well trained and equipped but small

There was huge enthusiasm at the start of the war; a massive recruitment drive encouraged thousands to join
"Kitchener's Army"; originally, it was promised that soldiers would return heroes and that war would be over by Xmas 478k volunteered between 4.8 and 12.9.1914, with a rate of 20k volunteers daily and a peak of 33k in a day on 3.9
New volunteers needed training and equipment but lacked the latter and were trained with farming equipment
War enthusiasm had disappeared by mid-1915; propaganda and moral pressure like that of the white feather ladies was no longer effective

To make up for the failures of the Oct '15 voluntary Derby Scheme and for a shortfall (casualties ↑; volunteers ↓), + in anticipation of a still lengthy war + the Somme, the Mil Service Act Jan '16 was passed

It came into effect in March 1916 and imposed conscription on all single men 18-41, except married men, the medically unfit, clergymen, teachers and certain classes of industrial worker

A second Act in May 1916 extended liability to married men, and a third in 1918 extended the age limit to 51
