Problems In Perturbation:

A First Look at Perturbation Theory James G. Simmonds, James E. Mann, Jr., 1998-01-01 Undergraduates in engineering and the physical sciences receive a thorough introduction to perturbation theory in this useful and accessible text. Students discover methods for obtaining an approximate solution of a mathematical problem by exploiting the presence of a small dimensionless parameter: the smaller the parameter, the more accurate the approximate solution. Knowledge of perturbation theory offers a twofold benefit: approximate solutions often reveal the exact solution's essential dependence on specified parameters; also, some problems resistant to numerical solutions may yield to perturbation methods. In fact, numerical and perturbation methods can be combined in a complementary way. The text opens with a well-defined treatment of finding the roots of polynomials whose coefficients contain a small parameter. Proceeding to differential equations, the authors explain many techniques for handling perturbations that reorder the equations or involve an unbounded independent variable. Two disparate practical problems that can be solved efficiently with perturbation methods conclude the volume. Written in an informal style that moves from specific examples to general principles, this elementary text emphasizes the why along with the how. Prerequisites include a knowledge of one-variable calculus and ordinary differential equations. This newly revised second edition features an additional appendix concerning the approximate evaluation of integrals.

Numerical Methods for Stiff Equations and Singular Perturbation Problems A. Miranker, 2001-11-30 Approach your problems from the right end and begin with the solution. It is that they can't see the problem answers. Then one day perhaps you will find the final question. The Hermit Clad in Crane Feathers G. K. Chesterton. The scandal of in R. Van Gulik's The Chinese Maze. Father Brown. The point of a pin. Murders. Growing specialization and diversification have brought a host of monographs and textbooks on increasingly specialized topics. However, the tree of knowledge of mathematics and related fields does not grow only by putting forth new branches. It also happens quite often in fact that branches which were thought to be completely disparate are suddenly seen to be related. Further, the kind and level of sophistication of mathematics applied in various sciences has changed drastically in recent years: measure theory is used non-trivially in regional and theoretical economics; algebraic geometry interacts with physics; the Minkowski lemma, coding theory and the structure of water meet one another in packing and covering theory; quantum fields, crystal defects and mathematical programming profit from homotopy theory; Lie algebras are relevant to filtering and prediction; and electrical engineering can use Stein spaces.

Adjoint Equations and Perturbation Algorithms in Nonlinear Problems Guri I. Marchuk, Valeri I. Agoshkov, Victor P. Shutyaev, 2018-04-24 Sparked by demands inherent to the mathematical study of pollution-intensive industry, global warming and the biosphere, Adjoint Equations and Perturbation Algorithms in Nonlinear Problems is the first book ever to systematically present the theory of adjoint equations for nonlinear problems as well as their application to perturbation algorithms. This new approach facilitates analysis of observational data.

the application of adjoint equations to retrospective study of processes governed by imitation models and the study of computer models themselves Specifically the book discusses Principles for constructing adjoint operators in nonlinear problems Properties of adjoint operators and solvability conditions for adjoint equations Perturbation algorithms using the adjoint equations theory for nonlinear problems in transport theory quasilinear motion substance transfer and nonlinear data assimilation Known results on adjoint equations and perturbation algorithms in nonlinear problems This groundbreaking text contains some results that have no analogs in the scientific literature opening unbounded possibilities in construction and application of adjoint equations to nonlinear problems of mathematical physics

Problems in Singular Perturbation Theory James Alan Cochran, 1962 Singular-Perturbation Theory Donald R. Smith, 1985-08-30 Introduction to singular perturbation problems Since the nature of the nonuniformity can vary from case to case the author considers and solves a variety of problems mostly for ordinary differential equations Analytical and Numerical Methods for Convection-dominated and Singularly Perturbed Problems Lubin Vulkov, John James Henry Miller, 2000 This volume is the Proceedings of the Workshop on Analytical and Computational Methods for Convection Dominated and Singularly Perturbed Problems which took place in Lozenetz Bulgaria 27-31 August 1998 The workshop attracted about 50 participants from 12 countries The volume includes 13 invited lectures and 19 contributed papers presented at the workshop and thus gives an overview of the latest developments in both the theory and applications of advanced numerical methods to problems having boundary and interior layers There was an emphasis on experiences from the numerical analysis of such problems and on theoretical developments The aim of the workshop was to provide an opportunity for scientists from the East and the West who develop robust methods for singularly perturbed and related problems and also who apply these methods to real life problems to discuss recent achievements in this area and to exchange ideas with a view of possible research co operation

Introduction to the General Theory of Singular Perturbations S. A. Lomov, This book is aimed at researchers and students in physics mathematics and engineering It contains the first systematic presentation of a general approach to the integration of singularly perturbed differential equations describing nonuniform transitions such as the occurrence of a boundary layer discontinuities boundary effects and so on The method of regularization of singular perturbations presented here can be applied to the asymptotic integration of systems of ordinary and partial differential equations

Differential Equations with Boundary Value Problems James R. Brannan, 2010-11-08 Unlike other books in the market this second edition presents differential equations consistent with the way scientists and engineers use modern methods in their work Technology is used freely with more emphasis on modeling graphical representation qualitative concepts and geometric intuition than on theoretical issues It also refers to larger scale computations that computer algebra systems and DE solvers make possible And more exercises and examples involving working with data and devising the model provide scientists and engineers with the tools needed to model complex real world situations

Qualitative Analysis of Physical Problems M

Gitterman, 2012-12-02 Qualitative Analysis of Physical Problems reviews the essential features of all the main approaches used for the qualitative analysis of physical problems and demonstrates their application to problems from a wide variety of fields. Topics covered include model construction, dimensional analysis, symmetry, and the method of the small parameter. This book consists of six chapters and begins by looking at various approaches for the construction of models along with nontrivial applications of dimensional analysis to some typical model systems. The following chapters focus on the application of symmetry to the microscopic and macroscopic properties of systems, the implications of analyticity and occurrence of singularities, and some methods of deriving the magnitude of the solutions that is approximate numerical values for problems that usually cannot be solved exactly in closed form. The final chapter demonstrates the use of qualitative analysis to address the problem of second harmonic generation in nonlinear optics. This monograph will be a useful resource for graduate students, experimental and theoretical physicists, chemists, engineers, college and high school teachers, and those who are interested in obtaining a general perspective of modern physics.
