THE MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM cont.

THE MUSCULOSKELETAL SYSTEM

The musculoskeletal system is composed of the bones, joints and the skeletal muscle that join the body's framework and allow movement.

Functions of Bones

- provide support and movement - bones act as levers and muscles generate the force for movement
- hemopoiesis - red blood cell production in the red bone marrow
- provide the protective boundaries for internal organs
- mineral storage - calcium, phosphate - maintains blood calcium levels

Types of Bones

long bones are composed of a diaphysis and two epiphyses. they are longer than they are wide and mostly found in the limbs.

short, irregular, flat and sesamoid bones have no diaphysis or epiphyses and can vary in shape and size.

- short - small cuboid - carpals (wrist)
- irregular - vary in characteristics - vertebrae
- flat - thin, burred - most skull bones, ribs
- sesamoid - round or oval - patella (knee cap)

Bone Structure

- long bones
- diaphysis - composed mainly of compact bone
- medullary canal - contains fatty growth bone marrow
- epiphysis - spongy bone with an outer layer of compact bone
- epiphyseal joint - separates the diaphysis and epiphysis - ossifies (hardens) when growth is complete
- periosteum - vascular membrane surrounding the bone - outer layer protects the bone, inner layer contains cells for bone production and breakdown intramembranous ossification mainly occurs during the formation of flat bones

- formed from connective tissue rather than cartilage
- ossification process
- osteoblasts secrete osteoid
- this gradually replaces the cartilage model
- osteoblasts lay down calcium and phosphate salts
- this facilitates the forming hard structure of mature bone stress and trauma can damage the bone over time - 10% of skeletal mass is remodelled every year

- osteoblasts get trapped in their matrix as bone grows, forming osteocytes

Bone Repair

bone is a living tissue that is continuously broken and rebuilt, particularly when a fracture occurs - there are a number of terms to classify the type of fracture

- simple - the bone does not penetrate through the skin
- compound - the bone ends penetrate through the skin
- pathological - weakened bone caused by disease when the bone is fractured, the healing process begins immediately, blood flows from the damaged vessels and forms a hematoma (blood clot)

cells known as osteoblasts build up a network of fibrous tissue (callus) and bridge the gap in the broken bone, replacing the blood clot spongy bone is deposited on to the callus, this fills in the fibrous network and stabilises the bone ends, healed blood vessels grow across the break compact bone replaces the callus and the bone properties

- strong - as a result of the mineral salts in the bone matrix
- flexible - due to the collagen in the bone matrix
- light - due to the spongy bone structure
- resistant to compression - due to the collagen in the bone matrix
- resistant to tension - due to the collagen in the bone matrix

bone repair

- bone repair is a complex process involving several steps
- the first step is the formation of a hematoma (blood clot)
- the second step is the formation of a bony callus
- the third step is the formation of a bony callus
