Abstract

In this article, the representation of male and female musicians is compared between three major genres of music performance and across three geographical regions: the United Kingdom, Europe, and the United States. Relevant data of artists from 40 world-class orchestras, 40 competition brass bands, and 40 top-selling recorded popular music groups were obtained from the websites of the respective organizations and from other authenticated sources. Information collected included the instruments played by each artist, the artist's status in the ensemble (e.g., principal/section leader/rank and file player). The membership of each instrumental section was then analyzed for balance of sex representation. Overall, across all three genres, male musicians considerably outnumbered females, but this imbalance was moderated by genre and regional differences. The lowest level of imbalance of sexes was observed in orchestras, with males occupying 60% of orchestral chairs compared with females 40%, but principal chairs/section leaders were found to be predominantly male. In brass bands, males predominated by a ratio of 76% males to 24% females, and section leader chairs were almost invariably occupied by males. In the genre of popular music, male performers massively outnumbered females by 85%–15% in every aspect of performers and group leader roles by 90% to 10%. Possible causes of these imbalances are explored for each genre. In all three genres representation of males and females was found to be closely related to the instruments played, for example, many more females than males were harpists, and many more males were trombonists and tuba players than were females. Reasons for these differences are explored with particular reference to differential patterns of education and musical training and to underlying historical and sociological issues.

civilization personal sexual familial religious and political Those who wait sadly for a spouse s death must sometimes wonder if the show of fidelity is necessary and whom it helps Most books on Alzheimer s focus on those who have it as opposed to those who care for someone with it This book offers a powerful and searching meditation on the extent to which someone married to Alzheimer s should be expected to suffer loneliness The diagnosis of dementia should not amount to a prohibition of sexual activity for both spouses Portmann encourages readers to risk honesty in assessing the moral dilemma using high profile cases such as Nancy Reagan and Justice Sandra Day O Connor to illustrate the enormity of the problem Ideal for classes considering the ethics of aging and sexuality Pornographic Art and the Aesthetics of Pornography H.

Damon R. Young,2018-10-04 Beginning in the late 1950s representations of and narratives about sex proliferated on French and U S movie screens Cinema began to display forms of sexuality that were no longer strictly associated with domesticity nor limited to heterosexual relations between loving couples Women s bodies and queer sexualities became intensely charged figures of political contestation aspiration and allegory central to new ways of imagining sexuality and to new liberal understandings of individual freedom and social responsibility In Making Sex Public Damon R Young tracks the emergence of two conflicting narratives on the one hand a new model of sex as harmoniously integrated into civic existence on the other an idea of women s and queer sexuality as corrosive to the very fabric of social life Taking a transatlantic perspective from the late 50s through the present from And God Created Woman and Barbarella to Cruising and Shortbus Young argues that cinema participated in the transformation of the sexual subject while showing how women and queers were both agents and objects of that transformation Thank God for Sex
