Selling Diversity Selling Diversity:

Selling Diversity Yasmeen Abu-Laban, Christina Gabriel, 2002-09-01 Since the 1990s Canadian policy prescriptions for immigration multiculturalism and employment equity have equated globalization with global markets This interpretation has transformed men and women of various ethnic backgrounds into trade enhancing commodities who must justify their skills and talents in the language of business This particular neo liberal reading of globalization and public policy has resulted in a trend the authors call selling diversity Using gender race ethnicity and class lenses to frame their analysis the authors review Canadian immigration multiculturalism and employment equity policies including their different historical origins to illustrate how a preference for selling diversity has emerged in the last decade In the process they suggest that a commitment to enhance justice in a diverse society and world has been muted Yet neo liberalism is not the only or inevitable option in this era of globalization and Canadians are engaging in transnational struggles for rights and equality and thereby increasing the interconnectedness between peoples across the globe Consequently the emphasis on selling diversity might be challenged
