

Chapter 8: Cytoplasmic Membrane Systems

1. Lysosomes:

- a. receptor-mediated endocytosis (Clathrin mediated endocytosis): Brings about the uptake of specific extracellular macromolecules following binding to receptors on the surface of the plasma membrane. Substances that enter the cell through clathrin-mediated RME become bound to coated pits on the plasma membrane. Clathrin-coated regions invaginate into the cytoplasm and then pinch free of the cytoplasm.
 - b. Bulk phase endocytosis (pinocytosis): nonspecific uptake of extracellular fluid.
 - c. phagocytosis: Single celled organisms and phagocytes white blood cells digest ingested materials by fusing phagosomes and lysosomes. The process by which a cell wraps part of its cell membrane around an external particle and envelopes it, taking it into the cell (endocytosis). The folds fuse to produce a vacuole (phagosome) that pinches off inwardly from the plasma membrane and fuses with a lysosome (phagolysosome). Mammals have "professional" phagocytes, e.g., macrophages and neutrophils, that phagocytize invading organisms, damaged and dead cells.
 - d. autophagy: Plays a role in the regulated process of organelle turnover, regulated destruction of the cell's own organelles and their replacement. A phagophore envelops an organelle to produce a double-membrane sequestering vesicle called an autophagosome. This fuses with a lysosome, generating an autolysosome, both the inner membrane of the autophagosome and the enclosed contents are degraded. Autophagy benefits: Helps protect an organism against intracellular threats. May play a role in the prevention of certain types of cancers and slowing the body's aging process.
2. The delivery of cargo from the Golgi to the lysosome: Lysosomal proteins are tagged and exported from the Golgi and delivered to the lysosome and sorting and transport of non-lysosomal proteins by: Lysosomal hydrolases are tagged with M-6-P to mark them for export to the lysosome. A signal patch allows a phosphotransferase to recognize lysosomal proteins. A terminal mannose residue is phosphorylated by a phosphotransferase. Acid hydrolases are transported from the trans-Golgi to lysosomes by Clathrin-coated. Transport to the lysosomes can occur through one of several pathways. Lysosomal storage diseases result from defects in lysosomal transport processes. 1 cell disease is most severe, hydrolases are exported from the cell instead of going to the lysosome. Mannose is not phosphorylated, so proteins are not delivered to the lysosome
 3. Transcytosis: transports molecules across epithelial cell sheets. The endocytic vesicle proceeds through an early endosome to a recycling endosome. There is no fusion with a lysosome nor does the early endosome become a late endosome. The recycling endosome exits the cell on the opposite side of entry. The cell can regulate the flux of transcytosis
 4. Recycling endosomes:
 5. Regulated secretory pathways of exocytosis:
 6. Constitutive secretory pathways of exocytosis:
 7. The mechanism by which clathrin-coated vesicles export material from the Golgi: Cargo molecules outside the cell bind to specific transmembrane target receptor proteins. The cargo/receptor conformation binds to adaptin molecules in the cytosol. Cargo/receptor/adaptin conformation binds to clathrin triskelions in the cytosol. Repeated triskelion assembly resembles a spherical cage. Dynamin proteins bind to the invaginated membranes. Accessory proteins bind to dynamin and promote membrane fusion of the vesicle to assume a spherical shape in the cytosol. An uncoating process removes the clathrin and adaptin proteins from the vesicle.
 8. The mechanism by which COP I vesicles function in vesicular traffic:
 9. The delivery of cargo from the Golgi to the secretory vesicles:
 10. The delivery of cargo from the Golgi to the cell membrane: Plasma membrane lipids and proteins are constitutively secreted from the trans-Golgi to the cell surface of membrane renewal and repair. Secretory vesicles store proteins and substances that are secreted later on, often in response to a signal

Chapter 2: Interaction Between Cells And Their Environment

The ECM composition and cellular interactions

1. ECM: Basement membrane basal lamina. It provides physical, biochemical, mechanical signals that can play key regulatory roles in determining the shape in activity of cells. It supports attached cells and maintain cell polarity.
