

SELECTION CRITERIA - EXAMPLES

Ensure you have read the information about how to respond to Selection Criteria.

Demonstrated ability to network effectively.

BEFORE:

"My networking skills are excellent. I have formed and recruited a number of committees such as a group of computer members on a volunteer basis to develop a consumer awareness guide for the purchase of computer hardware. I have established many good relationships with those within the welfare sector. I have made numerous fruitful relationships with people outside of the organisations I have worked for. I seek to understand the reality and situations of people I need to liaise with involve or seek input from. Recently I met with a logistics company several times to establish an understanding and to seek to establish a more effective way of distributing our brochures. This strategy has proved effective. Moreover my success in effective networking is demonstrated by inclusive outcomes such as the establishment of information booths in various welfare agencies."

AFTER:

In my current role as Health Advisor with XYZ Department, building cooperative and lasting relationships with stakeholders in the welfare sector is essential to maintaining credibility and confidence in the department's advice. Establishing links within the department and with suppliers is also critical to providing the best service to our welfare clients. (indicates why effectiveness is important, and what effective networking is)

My ability to network with suppliers, within the department and with welfare sector stakeholders and build cooperative working relationships has been demonstrated by:

- Persuading several welfare agencies to provide departmental information booths in their foyers. This result was achieved after building confidence in our ability to provide information, which took nine months to establish.
- Forming and recruiting members for a departmental computer group to develop a consumer awareness guide for the purchase of computer hardware. Five people volunteered their time and we produced a two-page guide.
- Building a relationship with a logistics company that agreed, after meeting with them several times, to distribute our brochures.

(the examples indicate that relationships took time to establish and there was an outcome, which indicates effectiveness.)

Demonstrated reliability in meeting deadlines and commitments, with an ability to set realistic goals, problem-solve and establish work priorities.

My ability to reliably meet deadlines and commitments is demonstrated by these examples:

- As Chairperson of the local primary school fete committee I changed the approach to organising this major fundraising event by producing a plan for the fete, with realistic targets and a project plan with deadlines for each of the seven sections of the fete. This plan solved several problems that had plagued past fetes, including not having sufficient time to gather/produce stock for stalls. The plan also established work priorities by indicating a financial target and the components of each section. By working with the coordinator of each section, we were able to set realistic deadlines and gain the commitment of most people contributing to the fete. The end result was that we not only met our targets but raised a record amount at this fete. I have now written a manual based on this experience so that next year's coordinator can build upon my experience.

(rather than break this criterion down into its components, the components are clearly referred to in the one example.)
