

Edith Wharton

Edith Wharton (born Edith Newbold Jones, January 24, 1862 – August 15, 1937) was an American writer and designer. Wharton drew upon her insider's knowledge of the upper-class New York "aristocracy" to portray realistically the lives and morals of the Gilded Age. In 1907, she became the first woman to win the Pulitzer Prize in Fiction, for her novel The Age of Innocence. She was inducted into the National Academy of Arts in 1930. Among her other well-known works are The House of Mirth, the novella Ethan Frome, and several notable ghost stories.

Despite not publishing her first novel until she was forty, Wharton became an extraordinarily productive writer. In addition to her 15 novels, seven novellas, and eighty-five short stories, she published poetry, books on design, travel, travel and lecture notes, and a memoir.

Many of Wharton's novels are characterized by subtle irony, and she is often credited with being the first to use the term "nouveau riche" to describe the wealthy class in America.

Wharton's novels, such as The House of Mirth and Ethan Frome, are often considered to be the most realistic and powerful depictions of the American upper class. Her novels are often described as "novels of manners" and are often compared to the works of Jane Austen and Henry James. Wharton's novels are often described as "novels of manners" and are often compared to the works of Jane Austen and Henry James.

Industrial Revolution and the Arts
The Industrial Revolution was a period of rapid change in the world. It brought about the invention of the steam engine, the factory system, and the modern city. It also brought about the rise of the novel as a literary form. The novel was a new way of telling stories, and it was often used to explore the social and moral issues of the time.

Wharton's novels, such as The House of Mirth and Ethan Frome, are often considered to be the most realistic and powerful depictions of the American upper class. Her novels are often described as "novels of manners" and are often compared to the works of Jane Austen and Henry James.
