Inhaltsangabe Introduction Rapid industrialisation and growth in population over the past two hundred years exert an increasing pressure on natural resources and the environment Billions of tons of controlled and scheduled waste are generated every year by the industrial sector worldwide which is often either pre treated on site or at a licensed contractor prior to disposal in landfills This practice if continued is leading to resource depletion and creates a potentially harmful legacy for future generations In order to move towards a more sustainable development as outlined in the Bruntland Report waste reduction reuse and recycling coupled with pollution prevention measures play an important part to slow down if not reverse this practice Heavy metals such as cadmium mercury lead and chromium are not degradable or renewable like biomass hence if they are to be used in future processes reuse and recycling are the only options At present heavy metals are used in the chemical industry sector for applications ranging from batteries to catalysts and surface coatings and can be found at various concentrations in gaseous liquid or solid waste Chromium is of particular interest owing to its legislative status and unique chemistry Chromium exists in nature primarily in one of two oxidation states There are other chemical oxidation states of chromium which include 0 II IV and V but they are considered transitory compared to more stable Cr III and Cr VI species Hexavalent chromium is a strong oxidizer which can react with DNA causing mutation while the trivalent organically complex form is a dietary supplement to help with proper glucose metabolism weight loss and muscle tone Unlike many other metals Cr VI can combine with oxygen to form water soluble negatively charged anions known as yellow chromate CrO_4^{2-} or orange dichromate $\text{Cr}_2\text{O}_7^{2-}$ which adsorb to positively charged sites in contrast to cationic metal species Therefore hexavalent chromium species are not strongly bonded in many soils under alkaline to slightly acidic conditions for example Thus they can be very mobile in subsurface environment while other metals precipitated out and exert toxic effects on biological systems Various well established methods may be used to treat industrial effluents and contaminated water such as reduction and precipitation reverse osmosis evaporation ion exchange and adsorption While these processes are able to remove

Nutrient Use-Efficiency in Plants: An Integrative Approach Guillermo Esteban Santa María, Francisco Rubio, Manuel Nieves-Cordones, 2021-02-03

Microbial Ecology Research Trends Thijs Van Dijk, 2008 Microbial ecology is the relationship of microorganisms with one another and with their environment. It concerns the three major domains of life: Eukaryota, Archaea, and Bacteria, as well as viruses. Microorganisms by their omnipresence impact the entire biosphere. They are present in virtually all of our planet's environments, including some of the most extreme, from acidic lakes to the deepest ocean and from frozen environments to hydrothermal vents. Microbes, especially bacteria, often engage in symbiotic relationships, either positive or negative, with other organisms, and these relationships affect the ecosystem. One example of these fundamental symbioses are chloroplasts, which allow eukaryotes to conduct photosynthesis. Chloroplasts are considered to be endosymbiotic cyanobacteria, a group of bacteria that are thought to be the origins of aerobic photosynthesis. Some theories state that this invention coincides with a major shift in the early Earth's atmosphere from a reducing atmosphere to an oxygen-rich atmosphere. This book presents new and important research in the field.

Micronutrients, Immunity and Infection Philip Calder, Sladjana Sobajic, 2025-10-03 Many micronutrients, vitamins, and minerals have clearly identified roles in supporting the function of cells of the immune system. People with micronutrient deficiencies often have immune impairments and are susceptible to infections, and to infections being severe, even fatal. In such individuals, micronutrient supplements can reverse immune impairments and reduce the risk of infections. Nevertheless, the relationships between micronutrient status, immunity, and infection are complex; some micronutrients that are required by the immune system, such as iron, can also increase the risk of certain infections, probably because those micronutrients favor pathogen growth and survival. Furthermore, the acute phase response to infections alters micronutrient metabolism. This makes understanding of the relationship between micronutrient status and infection more complicated COVID 19 increased interest in micronutrients including vitamins C and D and zinc amongst others in the context of immunity and infection but the findings of different studies have been inconsistent highlighting the complexity of this field This Research Topic welcomes manuscript submissions on micronutrients immunity and infection These may be mechanistic studies conducted in controlled settings such as in cell culture or experimental animals human epidemiological studies and trials in human participants and patients evaluating relationships between micronutrient exposure immune outcomes and infection and the underlying mechanisms Federal Register ,1983-07-18
