The Only Constant in HRM Today is Change Dianna L. Stone, James H. Dulebohn, 2019-04-01 In this issue of Research Human Resource Management we consider some of the challenges facing organizations today including changes in the population the increased competition for talent and the rise in the use of technology The issue also includes a number of thought provoking articles that describe strategies for developing sound theories in our field discuss the consequences of growing diversity in organizations consider the factors affecting the success of virtual teams present methods for increasing emotion control for incumbents in emotionally laden jobs and discuss leadership and performance management in virtual teams The first article in this issue compares prospect theory to goal setting theory and highlights the critical elements needed for theory development in our field A second article reviewed the literature published from 1976 to 2017 in the Academy of Management Review the primary theoretical journal in management and identified the factors associated with the most effective theories published over the last forty years In view of the growing diversity in organizations the next article provided a ranking of individual attributes that might be viewed as stigmatizing in organizations The findings revealed that blemishes of character e g criminality drug addiction were viewed as most stigmatizing followed by abominations of the body e g paralysis leg amputation and the least stigmatizing attributes were tribal stigmas e g ethnicity religion The fourth article focuses on a similar topic and presents an interesting model of the factors thought to influence weight based bias Both of these articles have important implications for overcoming unfair discrimination and increasing the inclusion of all individuals in organizations The next article offers an input throughput output model of virtual teams and reviews the literature on each of the variables thought to influence the success of these teams Given that many customer service jobs in the new economy involve high levels of emotional labor the sixth article reviews the strategies that can be used to train employees on emotion regulation in these challenging jobs The final article suggests that leadership and performance management should be aligned with the new team centric structure of organizations in order to enhance team and organizational performance In particular they maintained that organizations need to adopt positive and relational leadership and redesign performance appraisals to support the new team processes They also recommended that organizations discontinue the use of forced distribution performance ranking systems We are confident that these articles will inspire new ideas among researchers in our field and foster additional theory and research on these important topics Holistic Leadership Satinder

Dhiman, 2017-01-11 This book suggests that the solution to the current leadership crisis lies in leaders self cultivation process emanating from their deepest values and culminating in their contribution to the common good Traditional approaches to leadership rarely provide any permeating or systematic framework to garner a sense of higher purpose or nurture deeper moral and spiritual dimensions of leaders Learning to be an effective leader requires a level of personal transformation on the continuum of self spirit and service Synthesizing the best of contemporary approaches to leadership in a holistic manner this book presents a unique model of leadership that is built on the sound principles of Self Motivation Personal Mastery Creativity and Flow Emotional Intelligence Optimal Performance Appreciative Inquiry Authentic Leadership Transformational Leadership Positive Psychology Moral Philosophy and Wisdom Traditions of the world This broad interdisciplinary approach is well suited to effectively address the multifaceted issues faced by contemporary organizations and leaders It will be of great interest to graduate business and organizational leadership students and faculty as well as corporate leaders
