Content-Addressable Memories T. Kohonen,2012-12-06 Designers and users of computer systems have long been aware of the fact that inclusion of some kind of content addressable or associative functions in the storage and retrieval mechanisms would allow a more effective and straightforward organization of data than with the usual addressed memories with the result that the computing power would be significantly increased However although the basic principles of content addressing have been known for over twenty years the hardware content addressable memories CAMs have found their way only to special roles such as small buffer memories and control units This situation now seems to be changing Because of the development of new technologies such as very large scale integration of semiconductor circuits charge coupled devices magnetic bubble memories and certain devices based on quantum mechanical effects an increasing amount of active searching functions can be transferred to memory units The prices of the more complex memory components which earlier were too high to allow the application of these principles to mass memories will be reduced to a fraction of the total system costs and this will certainly have a significant impact on the new computer architectures In order to advance the new memory principles and technologies more information ought to be made accessible to a common user Encyclopedia of Chemical Technology ,1983 Alphabetical arrangement of entries that reflect current topics of interest to scientists chemists and engineers e g health safety toxicology and new materials Comprehensive coverage Each entry consists of lengthy signed article with illustrations and bibliography Health Services Research G.
