Meanderings in the Bush Richard MacMillen, Barbara MacMillen, 2009-07-15 The Channel Country is of special interest because its extreme aridity is disrupted unpredictably by summer monsoonal rains causing massive flooding and is followed by prodigious growth of plants and reproduction of animals before returning to daunting conditions of drought Yet it is a region teeming with life both plant and animal possessing unusual capacities for existing there It is also a region favoured by hardy pastoralists and their livestock who have learned to coexist with this harsh climate In Meanderings in the Bush the authors describe their many adventures and misadventures in the region with its climate its animals and its human inhabitants They also discuss results of their research which reveals some of the secrets for survival of many of the native animals including marsupials rodents birds and the remarkable desert crab These studies are cast in the light of both the prehistoric and historic records of the Lake Eyre Basin including the probable impacts of changing and or stable climates Aboriginal occupation later European pastoral development and the influences of introduced exotic mammals

Patients Charting the Course Institute of Medicine, Roundtable on Value and Science-Driven Health Care, 2011-10-21 As past current or future patients the public should be the health care system's unwavering focus and serve as change agents in its care Taking this into account the quality of health care should be judged not only by whether clinical decisions are informed by the best available scientific evidence but also by whether care is tailored to a patient's individual needs and perspectives However too often it is provider preference and convenience rather than those of the patient that drive what care is delivered As part of its Learning Health System series of workshops the Roundtable on Value Science-Driven Health Care hosted a workshop to assess the prospects for improving health and lowering costs by advancing patient involvement in the elements of a learning health system

Historians of the postwar transformation of science have focused largely on the physical sciences especially the relation of science to the military funding agencies In Shaping Biology Toby A Appel brings attention to the National Science Foundation and federal patronage of the biological sciences Scientists by training NSF biologists hoped in the 1950s that the new agency would become the federal government's chief patron for basic research in biology the only agency to fund the entire range of biology from molecules to natural history museums for its own sake Appel traces how this vision emerged and developed over the next two and a half decades from the activities of NSF's Division of Biological and Medical Sciences founded in 1952 through the cold war expansion of the 1950s and 1960s and the constraints of the Vietnam War era to its reorganization out of existence in 1975 This history of NSF highlights fundamental tensions in science policy that remain relevant today the pull between basic and applied science funding individuals versus funding departments or institutions elitism versus distributive policies of funding issues of red tape and accountability In this NSF funded study Appel explores how the agency developed how it worked and what difference it made in shaping modern biology in the United States Based on formerly untapped archival sources as well as on interviews of participants and building upon prior historical literature Shaping Biology covers new ground and raises significant issues for further research on postwar biology and on federal funding of science in general
