

Assessment and Documentation of Patient's Medical History, Physical Examination, and Laboratory Results

Introduction:

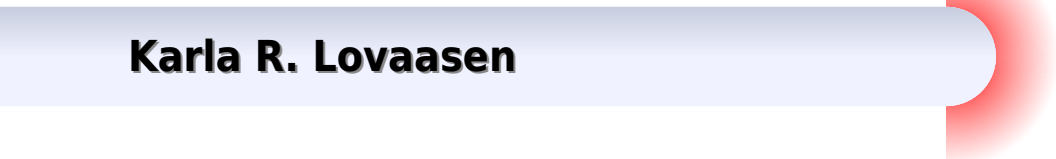

Assessing and documenting a patient's medical history, conducting a thorough physical examination, and analyzing laboratory results are vital components of medical surgical nursing. These activities provide crucial information about a patient's health status, aid in the diagnosis and treatment of conditions, and establish a baseline for monitoring patient progress. This section will delve into the detailed process of conducting a comprehensive assessment, documenting findings accurately, and interpreting laboratory results in a medical surgical setting.

I. Medical History Assessment:

1. Chief Complaint: Begin by eliciting the patient's chief complaint or reason for seeking medical care. Encourage the patient to provide a detailed description of their symptoms, including onset, duration, severity, and associated factors.
2. Present Illness: Explore the current illness or condition, including the progression of symptoms, any exacerbating or alleviating factors, and previous treatments or interventions.
3. Past Medical History (PMH): Obtain a comprehensive PMH, including any chronic illnesses, previous surgeries, major injuries, or hospitalizations. Pay specific attention to conditions that may impact the current health status or influence the planned surgical procedure.
4. Medication History: Document all current medications, including prescription drugs, over-the-counter medications, herbal supplements, and vitamins. Inquire about any allergies or adverse reactions to medications.
