

Wound Care Supplies Covered by Medicare

Medicare covers primary and secondary wound dressings, including items like hydrogel dressings, hydrocolloid dressings, alginate dressings, gauze, and foam dressings. In fact, this coverage extends to supplies directly applied to the wound (primary dressings) and those supporting primary dressings (secondary dressings). However, wound care supplies are not covered for less severe conditions like burns, stage 1 pressure ulcers, or wounds caused by trauma not needing surgical closure.

Medicare Documentation

Undoubtedly, healthcare providers are responsible for documenting wound progress at each visit, including size, evidence, drainage needs, and the injury's impact. In fact, Medicare covers wound treatment based on the presence of necessary documentation. To comply with LCD requirements, healthcare providers must thoroughly document the patient's signs, symptoms, and medical history related to the wound. This documentation should justify the medical necessity of advanced wound care services and supplies and demonstrate how these services will positively impact the wound's healing process.

• Medicare Advantage Coverage

Patients may opt for Medicare Advantage Plans, which could offer additional benefits and coverage beyond Original Medicare. However, out-of-pocket expenses and coverage specifics under Medicare Advantage Plans vary, requiring direct contact with insurers for detailed information.
