Ridpath's History of the World, Vol. 5 of 9 (Classic Reprint) John Clark Ridpath, 2017-11-18 Excerpt from Ridpath's History of the World Vol 5 of 9 It is at this point of view that We now take our stand I shall hope to continue the narrative in the same manner as that already employed in the two preceding volumes Albeit the matter is now much changed from the character which it bore in the Classical Ages and even more changed from the character which it bore in the Epochs of Darkness In historical narrative every such change in subject matter must needs be reflected to a certain extent in the style and treatment The thought when fixed intently on any event takes by sympathy much of the form and some thing of the substance of the thing considered About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Ridpath's History of the World John Clark Ridpath, 1897 Ridpath's History of the World, Vol. 7 of 9 (Classic Reprint) John Clark Ridpath, 2015-07-07 Excerpt from Ridpath's History of the World Vol 7 of 9 At first view it will appear to the student of history that the Ancient and the Modern World are in their historical records of about equal duration and importance The beginnings of Ancient History are set in a general way about as far beyond the Christian Era as our own times are placed thereafter To Ancient History belong the Classical Ages an epoch of achievement and glory which may well challenge the most brilliant periods of the recent era But a closer judgment of the relative importance of Ancient and Modern History will show the great preponderance of the latter This is one of the more important facts which have impressed themselves upon the writer's mind in the preparation of these Volumes He has come to believe in the great pre-eminence of the Modern Era over the most brilliant epochs of Antiquity This is said of the aggregate and total achievements of modern times as compared with the aggregate and total achievements of any given period in the history of the Ancient World About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Ridpath's History of the World, Vol. 4 of 9 (Classic Reprint) John Clark Ridpath, 2015-07-03 Excerpt from Ridpath's History of the World Vol 4 of 9 The opening paragraphs of Modern History relate to the Barbarian Nations The warlike tribes that for several centuries had beaten against the northeastern frontiers of the Roman Empire at last burst through the barriers which the Caesars had set against them and swept the Old Civilization into ruins Peninsular Europe became the spoil of the invaders The immense populations of barbarism long heaped up on the further banks of the Rhine and the Danube suddenly diffused themselves as a spreading flood over all the better parts of the West It may prove of interest to take at least a cursory survey of the barbarians as it respects their ethnology institutions and general history The warlike peoples by whom the Empire of the Romans was subverted belonged to three different races the Germanic the Slavic and the Seythie Whether the first two groups may be traced to a common Teutonic origin is a question belonging to the ethnologist rather than to the historian It is sufficient to note the fact that in the fifth century the Germanic and Slavic tribes were already so clearly discriminated as to constitute different groups of population As to the Seythie or Asiatic invaders they were manifestly of a distinct stock from the Teutonic nations whom they drove before them into the confines of the Empire 1 The Germans To this family belonged the Goths with their two divisions of Visitor Western and Ostro or Eastern Goths the Allemannian confederation consisting of several tribes the Suevi being the chief the Marcomanni the Quadi the Hermunduri the Heruli the Gepidae the Vandals the Lombards the Franks the Angles the Saxons the Burgundians and the Bavarians Of these many and populous tribes among the most important were the Goths Their origin has never been definitely ascertained The first historical contact between them and the Romans was in the year A D 250 when the Emperor Decius was called to confront them on the Danube They had however been previously mentioned both by Pliny and Ptolemy About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
