Righting Canadas Wrongs Reconciliation Commissions:

Righting Canada's Wrongs: Residential Schools Melanie Florence, 2015-12-15 Canada's residential school system for aboriginal young people is now recognized as a grievous historic wrong committed against First Nations, Metis and Inuit peoples. This book documents this subject in a format that will give all young people access to this painful part of Canadian history. In 1857 the Gradual Civilization Act was passed by the Legislature of the Province of Canada with the aim of assimilating First Nations people. In 1879 Prime Minister Sir John A. Macdonald commissioned the Report on Industrial Schools for Indians and Half Breeds. This report led to native residential schools across Canada. First Nations and Inuit children aged seven to fifteen years old were taken from their families, sometimes by force, and sent to residential schools where they were made to abandon their culture. They were dressed in uniforms, their hair was cut, they were forbidden to speak their native language, and they were often subjected to physical and psychological abuse. The schools were run by the churches and funded by the federal government. About 150,000 aboriginal children went to 130 residential schools across Canada. The last federally funded residential school closed in 1996 in Saskatchewan. The horrors that many children endured at residential schools did not go away. It took decades for people to speak out, but with the support of the Assembly of First Nations and Inuit organizations, former residential school students took the federal government and the churches to court. Their cases led to the Indian Residential Schools Settlement Agreement, the largest class action settlement in Canadian history. In 2008 Prime Minister Harper formally apologized to former native residential school students for the atrocities they suffered and the role the government played in setting up the school system. The agreement included the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which has since worked to document this experience and toward reconciliation. Through historical photographs, documents, and first person narratives from First Nations, Inuit, and Metis people who survived residential schools, this book offers an account of the injustice of this period in Canadian history. It documents how this official racism was confronted and finally acknowledged.

Righting Canada's Wrongs: Inuit Relocations Frank James Tester, Krista Ulujuk Zawadski, 2023-11-07 A ground breaking account of multiple forced relocations by the Canadian government of Inuit communities and individuals. All have been the subject of apologies but are little known beyond the Arctic. The Inuit community has proven resilient to many attempts at assimilation, relocation, and evacuation to the south. In a highly visual and appealing format for young readers, this book explores the many forced relocations of Inuit families and communities in the Canadian Arctic from the 1950s to the 1990s. Governments promoted and forced relocation based on misinformation and racist attitudes. These actions changed Inuit lives forever. This book documents the Inuit experience and the resilience and strength they displayed in the face of these measures. Years afterwards, there have been multiple apologies by the Canadian government for its actions and some measure of restitution for the harms caused. Included in the book are accounts of a community forced to move to the High Arctic where they found themselves with little food and almost no shelter of children.

suddenly taken away from their families and communities to be transported to hospitals for treatment for tuberculosis and of the notorious slaughter by RCMP officers of hundreds of sled dogs in Arctic settlements Though apologies have been made Inuit in northern Canada still face conditions of inadequate housing schools that fail to teach their language and epidemics of infectious diseases like TB Yet still the Inuit have achieved a measure of self government control over resource development while they enrich cultural life through music film art and literature This book enables readers to understand the colonialism and racism that remain embedded in Canadian society today and the successful resistance of Inuit to assimilation and loss of cultural identity Like other volumes in the Righting Canada's Wrongs series this book uses a variety of visuals first person accounts short texts and extracts from documents to appeal to a wide range of young readers

Righting Canada's

Wrongs: Africville Gloria Ann Wesley, 2021-08-17 Beginning in the 18th century Black men and women arrived from the U S and settled in various parts of Nova Scotia In the 1800s a small Black community had developed just north of Halifax on the shores of the Bedford Basin The community became known as Africville and grew to about 400 people Its residents fished farmed operated small retail stores and found work in the city Jobs for Black people were hard to find with many occupations blocked by racist practices Women often worked as domestics and many men were train porters A school and a church were the community's key institutions The City of Halifax located a number of undesirable industries in Africville but refused residents demands for basic services such as running water sewage disposal paved roads street lights a cemetery public transit garbage collection and adequate police protection City planners developed urban renewal plans and city politicians agreed to demolish the community Residents strongly opposed relocation but city officials ignored their protests and began to seize and bulldoze the homes In 1967 the church was demolished in the middle of the night This was a blow that signaled the end of Africville In the 1970s some community members organized and began working for an apology and compensation In 2010 Halifax's mayor made a public apology for the community's suffering and mistreatment Some former residents accepted this others continued to campaign for restitution This new edition documents the continued fight for compensation by community members and their descendants The spirit and resilience of Africville lives on in new generations of African Nova Scotians
