Human-Computer Interaction M.G. Helander, T.K. Landauer, P.V. Prabhu, 1997-08-18 This completely revised edition of the Handbook of Human Computer Interaction of which 80% of the content is new reflects the developments in the field since the publication of the first edition in 1988 The handbook is concerned with principles for design of the Human Computer Interface and has both academic and practical purposes It is intended to summarize the research and provide recommendations for how the information can be used by designers of computer systems The volume may also be used as a reference for teaching and research Professionals who are involved in design of HCI will find this volume indispensable including computer scientists cognitive scientists experimental psychologists human factors professionals interface designers systems engineers managers and executives working with systems development Much of the information in the handbook may also be generalized to apply to areas outside the traditional field of HCI Research in Education ,1972

Resources in Education ,1998 Working Memory and Exploration in Training the Knowledge and Skills Required by Digital Systems Jean L. Dyer,2001 Variations in computer based training CBT procedures were compared in training the skills and knowledge required of a prototype map interface for the Land Warrior system Soldiers from four Infantry courses participated representing the chain of command within an Infantry platoon from platoon leader to rifleman Soldiers were first trained on codes that uniquely identified individuals and units on the map Then soldiers learned how to use map functions such as pan zoom determine range and find individuals and units Lessons that contained a large volume of information before soldiers could apply that information and commit it to memory resulted in low scores on both the code and map exercises Breaking up the content into smaller chunks of information tended to be more effective Although soldiers who learned the map on their own via an exploratory condition had the lowest map performance exploratory learning may have potential as these soldiers spent relatively little time exploring The results demonstrate the importance of adapting to individual differences in the learning rate of soldiers They also provide insights regarding how to design effective and efficient CBT for digital systems DTIC
