TRANSISTORISED BROADCAST RECEIVER

MODEL EB36

INSTRUCTION MANUAL

The EDDYSTONE Model EB36 is a fully transistorised receiver designed and produced primarily for the enthusiastic broadcast listener whose requirements are not entirely fulfilled by the average domestic "wireless set". Normal long and medium wave reception is provided together with continuous short-wave coverage down to the popular 16-metre band. The receiver is normally powered from a self-contained battery pack but provision is made for mains operation using a special power unit which fits into the battery compartment.

Ten transistors and five diodes are employed in the high-performance circuit which is based on the well-proven "RCBY" communication receiver in use by professional and amateur operators throughout the world. The design makes use of a fully-tuned r.f. amplifier stage which ensures excellent reception even when using a short inefficient aerial. An overload protection circuit is incorporated to prevent damage to the receiver when used in close proximity to a high-powered transmitter.

Facilities are available for using the receiver as a high-quality "tuner" to feed a tape recorder or "hi-fi" outfit. In this role, the external unit can remain permanently connected ready for immediate use without affecting the normal functions of the receiver in any way. The internal loudspeaker can be employed for monitoring purposes or telephones can be used where this is more convenient.

Versatility is further enhanced by making provision for using the audio stages of the receiver in conjunction with an external pick-up, tape-deck or microphone. Many varied applications will be found for the receiver when used in this manner.

Construction follows much the same pattern as that found on the professional receivers in the Eddystone range. Styling is in keeping with modern trends and the receiver will fit nicely into any domestic decor. Finish is to the highest standard with attractive two-tone colouring.

The complete frequency coverage is divided into five ranges as follows:

Range 1		8.5 — 22.0 Mc/s. (SW1).
Range 2		3.5 — 8.5 Mc/s. (SW2).
Range 3		1.5 — 3.5 Mc/s. (SW3).
Range 4		550 — 1500 kc/s. (MW).
Range 5		150 — 350 kc/s. (LW).
