

1.0 INTRODUCCIÓN

La química es una de las ciencias que se ocupan del estudio de la materia: sus propiedades, la estructura, las transformaciones y la energía puesta en juego en las mismas, como también la síntesis de los sistemas materiales. Se la estudia desde lo macroscópico, microscópico y simbólico.

Desde un punto de vista macroscópico, la química estudia los fenómenos que provocan cambios entre los estados inicial y final de un sistema, como son la oxidación del hierro y la combustión de un papel. (1)

Cualquier aspecto del desarrollo material de la humanidad tiene en la química una contribución fundamental. Así, esta ciencia aplicada proporciona aceros especiales, aleaciones ligeras, derivados del petróleo, lacas, etcétera. Por otra parte, ayuda a la fabricación de abonos artificiales, a la conservación de alimentos y a la industria textil, a través de la elaboración de las modernas fibras artificiales. La química es la base de la producción de medicamentos, algunos de los cuales son de uso casi cotidiano para salvaguardar la salud y otros, por el contrario, para dañarla. Así, es inimaginable hoy una cirugía sin productos anestésicos y antisépticos, al igual que no es concebible un avión o un automóvil sin carburantes. Siguiendo con el hilo de que la química está en todas partes, el metabolismo y la respiración de los seres vivos no son más que procesos químicos.

Dicho lo anterior, partimos hacia el concepto de "seguridad química", que, se entiende cómo el proceso a través del cual se consigue que se desarrollen las actividades en las que intervienen compuestos químicos de forma que se garantice la seguridad de la salud humana y el ambiente. Incluye todas las sustancias químicas, ya sean naturales y manufacturadas; así como toda la gama de situaciones de exposición, desde la presencia natural de sustancias químicas en el medio ambiente hasta su extracción o síntesis, procedimientos industriales, transporte, uso y eliminación. (2, 3)

En relación a los procedimientos es importante destacar la importancia de las habilidades en el uso de instrumentos y técnicas básicas de laboratorio, de la interpretación de experiencias, gráficos y datos; de la modelización de los sistemas químicos; del cálculo con cantidades químicas; del diseño y realización de investigaciones experimentales; de la extracción y comunicación de conclusiones en la resolución de problemas teóricos y prácticos; y de la capacidad de argumentar y de tomar decisiones, así como del uso de las nuevas tecnologías de la información y la comunicación.

El pensamiento químico, sin dudas, toma los conocimientos de esta disciplina para enfrentar y resolver todas las áreas del técnico, además de efectivizarlas, no tan sólo en torno a las tareas preventivas en higiene y seguridad del ambiente, sino también a lo económico y legal (Ley Nacional 19.587 y sus decretos Reglamentarios 351/79 y 1338/96). En este último aspecto, resulta menester vincular el juicio del estudiante no tan sólo con su futuro laboral, sino también en su desarrollo como miembro de una sociedad en movimiento con desafíos vitales.

Este manual es una propuesta metodológica para la definición de la naturaleza de la imagen y para el análisis de especímenes icónicos en toda su diversidad. Parte de la descripción de los dos grandes procesos que intervienen en toda génesis icónica: la percepción y la representación. A partir de ahí explora la estructura y los medios de significación específicos de las imágenes aisladas como la fotografía y la pintura y de las secuenciales como el cine, el cómic o la televisión. El espacio de la imagen, su estructura temporal o los procesos sintéticos o de montaje son aspectos estudiados en profundidad a lo largo del libro.
