Etzioni-Halevy, 2024-10-31 First published in 1979 Political Manipulation and Administrative Power examines in detail some of the means by which elites in western style democracies have established and maintained themselves in power It describes how elites have manipulated the public by methods which run counter to the spirit and the letter of democracy yet without overtly disrupting the democratic system In exploring the relationship between political corruption and class interests the author takes issue with the Marxist perspective to argue that the type of political manipulation under discussion and its decline in some countries cannot be explained by the economically dominant classes interests She further contends that such manipulation cannot be explained by the characteristics of the rank and file public such as lack of political awareness poverty and disorganization She maintains that such manipulation can be best explained by certain characteristics of the ruling elites themselves and the power structures especially administrative they shape and head Using an elitist perspective in conjunction with a structural functional one she goes on to show that the decline of such practices in some countries more than in others can be explained by the normative codes and role definitions which once adopted and institutionalized by the elites act as a restraint on the manner in which they entrench themselves in power A comparative study of Britain the USA Australia and Israel this book is based on general principles which make its argument applicable to other western style democracies It will be a beneficial read for students and researchers of politics comparative studies and international politics
