Haynes,2012-09-24 On Palm Sunday 1964 at the Second Presbyterian Church in Memphis a group of black and white students began a kneel in to protest the church s policy of segregation a protest that would continue in one form or another for more than a year and eventually force the church to open its doors to black worshippers In The Last Segregated Hour Stephen Haynes tells the story of this dramatic yet little studied tactic which was the strategy of choice for bringing attention to segregationist policies in Southern churches Kneel ins involved surprise visits to targeted churches usually during Easter season and often resulted in physical standoffs with resistant church people The spectacle of kneeling worshippers barred from entering churches made for a powerful image that invited both local and national media attention The Memphis kneel ins of 1964 65 were unique in that the protesters included white students from the local Presbyterian college Southwestern now Rhodes And because the protesting students presented themselves in groups that were mixed by race and gender white church members saw the visitations as a hostile provocation and responded with unprecedented efforts to end them But when Church officials pressured Southwestern president Peyton Rhodes to call off his students or risk financial reprisals he responded that Southwestern is not for sale Drawing on a wide range of sources including extensive interviews with the students who led the kneel ins Haynes tells an inspiring story that will appeal not only to scholars of religion and history but also to pastors and church people concerned about fostering racially diverse congregations Public Ledger Almanac ,1887 The Presbyterian ,1901 History of Chicago: From 1857 until the fire of 1871 Alfred Theodore Andreas,1885 Christianity in the War Amos Stevens Billingsley,1872
