Neurobiology of human language and its evolution: Primate and Nonprimate Perspectives Constance Scharff,Angela D. Friederici,Michael Petrides, The evolution of human language has been discussed for centuries from different perspectives Linguistic theory has proposed grammar as a core part of human language that has to be considered in this context Recent advances in neurosciences have allowed us to take a new neurobiological look on the similarities and dissimilarities of cognitive capacities and their neural basis across both closely and distantly related species A couple of decades ago the comparisons were mainly drawn between human and non human primates investigating the cytoarchitecture of particular brain areas and their structural connectivity Moreover comparative studies were conducted with respect to their ability to process grammars of different complexity So far the available data suggest that non human primates are able to learn simple probabilistic grammars but not hierarchically structured complex grammars The human brain which easily learns both grammars differs from the non human brain among others in how two language relevant brain regions Broca s area and superior temporal cortex are connected structurally Whether the more dominant dorsal pathway in humans compared to non human primates is causally related to this behavioral difference is an issue of current debate Ontogenetic findings suggest at least a correlation between the maturation of the dorsal pathway and the behavior to process syntactically complex structures although a causal prove is still not available Thus the neural basis of complex grammar processing in humans remains to be defined More recently it has been reported that songbirds are also able to distinguish between sound sequences reflecting complex grammar Interestingly songbirds learn to sing by imitating adult song in a process not unlike language development in children Moreover the neural circuits supporting this behavior in songbirds bear anatomical and functional similarities to those in humans In adult humans the fiber tract connecting the auditory cortex and motor cortex dorsally is known to be involved in the repetition of spoken language This pathway is present already at birth and is taken to play a major role during language acquisition In songbirds detailed information exist concerning the interaction of auditory motor and cortical basal ganglia processing during song learning and present a rich substrate for comparative studies The scope of the Research Topic is to bring together contributions of researchers from different fields who investigate grammar processing in humans non human primates and songbirds with the aim to find answers to the question of what constitutes the neurobiological basis of grammar learning Open questions are Which brain networks are relevant for grammar learning Is there more than one dorsal pathway one from temporal cortex to motor cortex and one to Broca s area and if so what are their functions Has the ability to process sequences of a given hierarchical complexity evolved in different phylogenetic lines birds primates other vocal production learners such as bats Is the presence of a sensory to motor circuit in humans a precondition for development of a dorsal pathway between the temporal cortex and Broca s area What role do subcortical structures Basal Ganglia play in vocal and grammar learning The Neurobiology of the Prefrontal Cortex Richard E. Passingham, Steven P. Wise, 2012-07-12 The prefrontal cortex makes up almost a third of the human brain The Neurobiology of the Prefrontal Cortex presents a new theory about its fundamental function Written by two leading brain scientists it is an important contribution to our understanding of the evolution and functioning of the human brain Cognition, Evolution, and Behavior Sara J. Shettleworth, 1998 How do animals perceive the world learn remember search for food or mates and find their way around Do any non human animals count imitate one another use a language or think as we do What use is cognition in nature and how might it have evolved Historically research on such questions has been fragmented between psychology where the emphasis has been on theoretical models and lab experiments and biology where studies focus on evolution and the adaptive use of perception learning and decision making in the field Cognition Evolution and the Study of Behavior integrates research from psychology behavioral ecology and ethology in a wide ranging synthesis of theory and research about animal cognition in the broadest sense from species specific adaptations in fish to cognitive mapping in rats and honeybees to theories of mind for chimpanzees As a major contribution to the emerging discipline of comparative cognition the book is an invaluable resource for all students and researchers in psychology zoology and behavioral neuroscience It will also interest general readers curious about the details of how and why animals including humans process retain and use information as they do Psychology A2 Mike Cardwell, Cara Flanagan, 2003-09 The unique approach of this book is that it provides comprehensive coverage of only the most popular areas of the AQA A2 specification relationships pro and anti social behaviour biological rhythms cognitive development social and personality development evolutionary explanations of human behaviour psychopathology treating mental disorders plus issues debates and approaches This core textbook offers students the opportunity to improve their grades and have their very own expert to take home the friendly examiner The Complete Companion Study Guide to Developmental Psychology Today, Second Edition, 1975 The School Librarian School Library Association, 1972 Student Guide Explorations Psychology Doyle, King, 1987-02
