

Disadvantages of Process Costing

1. Costs ascertained are historical in nature and are of limited use in case of control.
2. This method conceals weaknesses and inefficiencies in processing.
3. The evaluation of work-in-progress is on the basis of degree of completion and merely a guess work.
4. It does not help in evaluating the performance of individual workers.
5. It becomes difficult to compute average cost where more than one type of product is manufactured.
