Genetic Resources of Legumes in the Mediterranean Nigel Maxted, Sarita Jane Bennett, 2013-03-14 Genetic erosion that is the loss of native plant and genetic diversity has been exponential from the Mediterranean Basin through the Twentieth century This careless eradication of species and genetic diversity as a result of human activities from a hot spot of diversity threatens sustainable agriculture and food security for the temperate regions of the world Since the early 1900s there has been a largely ad hoc movement to halt the loss of plant diversity and enhance its utilisation The Convention on Biological

Diversity and Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations International Undertaking on Plant Genetic Resources both highlight the need to improve conservation methodologies and enhance utilisation techniques It has been argued that the most important component of biodiversity is the genetic diversity of crop and forage species used to feed humans and livestock These cultivated and related wild species provides the raw material for further selection and improvement Leguminosae species are of major economic importance peas chickpeas lentils and faba beans as well as numerous forage species and provide a particularly rich source of protein for human and animal foods Their distribution is concentrated in the Mediterranean region and therefore the improvement of their conservation and use in the region is critical This text is designed to help ensure an adequate breadth of legume diversity is conserved and to help maximise the use of that conserved diversity The subjects of conservation and use of legume diversity the Mediterranean ecosystem and taxonomy of legumes are introduced Generic reviews of the taxonomy centre of diversity ecogeographic distribution genetic diversity distribution conservation status conservation gaps and future research needs are provided along with a discussion of the importance of rhizobia to the maintenance of legume diversity Current ex situ and in situ conservation activities as well current legume uses are reviewed In conclusion future priorities for ex situ and in situ plant genetic conservation and use of Mediterranean legumes are highlighted All contributors look forward rather than simply reviewing past and current activities and therefore it is hoped that the identification of genetic erosion location of taxonomic and genetic diversity and promotion of more efficient utilisation of conserved material will be enhanced

Vanishing Borders Hilary French, 2016-06-11 The world is shrinking faster than ever Goods money microbes pollution people and ideas are crossing boundaries ever more frequently The implications for our future and for the health of the planet are profound Vanishing Borders outlines the ecological challenges posed and then goes on to define the necessary strategies for tackling them Presently national governments are singularly ill equipped for tackling transitional environmental problems from ozone depletion to soaring trade in commodities such as timber problems which are climbing ever higher on the international political agenda Industrial and developing countries are on a collision course over climate change and water shortages are creating tensions in several parts of the world The author argues that only a worldwide commitment to strengthening treaties and institutions needed to integrate ecological considerations into the rules of global commerce holds out hope Over 200 international environmental treaties exist but most need more stringent conditions and enforcement and continuing support from NGO and business communities Significantly the digital revolution integral in itself to processes to globalization offers channels through which powerful coalitions can effect change The book provides a compelling and accessible analysis and a clear plan of action in pursuit of environmental stability Originally published in 2000
