Public Art Thinking Museums Differently:

Public Art Hilde S. Hein, 2006 Public Art acknowledges the trend among contemporary museums to promote participatory and processual exhibition strategies meant to elicit subjective experience At the same time it valorizes the object oriented tradition that has long differentiated museums from other institutions similarly committed to public service and the perpetuation of cultural values To blend and expand these aims Hein draws upon a movement toward ephemerality and impermanence in public art She proposes a new dynamic for the museum that is temporal and pluralistic while retaining a grounding in material things The museum is an agent not a repository and like public art it interacts constructively with passing and transitory publics As an actor with social clout the museum has moral impact and responsibilities beyond those of the individuals that comprise its collective identity The book should be read by museum workers and students by arts and foundation administrators critics educators aestheticians institutional historians and theorists and by anyone interested in the transmission of cultural concepts and values

Public Art Hilde Hein, 2006-07-27 By considering the museum itself as art rather than as a receptacle this work argues for an improved understanding of the role museums play in shaping public discourse

Doing Museology Differently Duncan Grewcock, 2013-09-05 One might believe that museum studies is a stable field of academic inquiry based on a set of familiar institutional forms and functions But as institutions museums have never been stable or singular and neither has the discipline of museum studies Museum studies as a field of academic inquiry has received little critical attention One result of this neglect has arguably been a lack of invention in museum studies another is the distancing of academic museum studies from museum practice Doing Museology Differently charts a different course A critical creative reflection on academic practice the book takes the form of a narrative account of museological fieldwork A research story unfolds challenging academic conventions at the level of its own presentation the book combines critical museum visiting with an autobiographical voice The identification of a previously underexplored interdisciplinary space leads the author to experiment with museum studies using contemporary developments in the theory and practice of human geography The new approaches to museological research and representation that emerge from this unique inquiry challenge assumed institutional and intellectual boundaries and act as a call to further creative experimentation Public Art Hilde Hein, 2006-07-27 Public Art acknowledges the trend among contemporary museums to promote participatory and processual exhibition strategies meant to elicit subjective experience At the same time it valorizes the object oriented tradition that has long differentiated museums from other institutions similarly committed to public service and the perpetuation of cultural values To blend and expand these aims Hein draws upon a movement toward ephemerality and impermanence in public art She proposes a new dynamic for the museum that is temporal and pluralistic while retaining a grounding in material things The museum is an agent not a repository and like public art it interacts constructively with passing and transitory publics As an actor with social clout the museum has moral impact and responsibilities beyond those of the individuals that comprise its collective identity The book should be read by museum workers and students by arts and foundation administrators critics educators aestheticians institutional historians and theorists and by anyone interested in the transmission of cultural concepts and values Public Art and Museums in Cultural Districts J. Lorente, 2018-09-03 Museums and public art have traditionally taken significantly different approaches to customer engagement but throughout history they have also worked together in some urban contexts notably as landmarks of so called cultural districts Public Art and Museums in Cultural Districts reviews their changing interactions in many different types of cities since the Enlightenment or even before going back to the etymological origins of museums and monuments in classical antiquity The type of historical enquiry presented within the volume is not intended as a total narrative but the international study cases considered convey a global panorama of the shifting paradigms set in different periods by some cultural neighbourhoods and emulated worldwide Blurring boundaries between art history museology and urbanism this critical account explores past tensions achievements and failures giving insightful consideration to present policies and pointing out reasonable recommendations for the future regarding public heritage Presenting for the first time an insights into the role of collections of public art as landmarks of cultural districts this book considers collections displayed outdoors from the double perspective of curatorial outreach and civic values This book will fill a gap in the existing museum studies literature hitherto mainly focused on indoor collecting and curatorial policies but increasingly more and more attentive to their outside context As such the book should be of great interest to academics researchers and students working in the fields of art heritage museum studies and urban history It should also be of value to professionals working in the museum and art sectors The Practice of Public Art Cameron Cartiere, Shelly Willis, 2008-05-07 Wide ranging and timely The Practice of Public Art brings together practicing artists curators activists art writers administrators city planners and educators from the United Kingdom and United States to offer differing perspectives on the many facets of the public art process The Practice of Public Art examines the continual evolution of public art from monuments and memorials to socially
