

2 Figurative language

How can I use figurative language in my own writing?

There are opportunities to use figurative language in your own writing in the exams. There are in Component 1 Section B in a narrative or recount text, and in Component 2 Section B in two transactional / persuasive writing texts.

Descriptions and narratives

When writing a narrative or recount, you will be assessed on your ability to write imaginatively and to create an engaging, interesting text for your reader. One way of doing this is to use figurative language to build up some vivid images.

For figurative language techniques that draw comparisons, make sure you select the things you are comparing carefully. Try to create images that have impact. For example, consider which of these three similes works best.

1. The train hurtled past like a fast car.

2. The train hurtled past like a big bird.

3. The train hurtled past like a raging bull.

Simile 1 is weak because a train is too similar to a car.

Simile 2 is better: a train resembles a bird slightly.

Simile 3 is best, because a mighty bull, like a train, is fast, powerful, and unstoppable.

Think of the effect you want to achieve, then what imagery could create it. For example, if you want to create a negative impression of teachers destroying books, compare them to something ferocious or wild, like the comparisons to thunder and animals that the writer selects in Extract 1 on page 14.

Tip
Figurative language works best if the comparison gives the reader powerful, vivid ideas about what is being described. Try to be imaginative in your ideas, choosing images that may inspire or entertain your reader.

Transactional and persuasive writing

When writing a transactional or persuasive text, you will be assessed on your ability to communicate clearly and put forward your viewpoint. You may wish to include some figurative language to emphasise a point or express an opinion, but use it sparingly and only when relevant.

For example, if you wanted to persuade your audience that students should have access to their phones during the school day, you might use a metaphor. Which of the three metaphors below do you think is most effective?

1. Phones are platforms for young people.

2. Phones are the lifeblood of young people.

3. Phones are portable pacifiers for young people.

Tip
Avoid comparing figurative language in the Component 1 writing texts. One or two images can help to convey your ideas and views, but avoid spending time on creating extended imagery.

Make sure you use with a definition for each of these key terms.

extended metaphor figurative language metaphor oxymoron pathetic fallacy personification simile symbol

Use the following questions to check your understanding of the knowledge covered in this section. Then cover the answers column with a piece of paper and write down as many as you can. Check and repeat.

Questions

Answers

1 What two words are typically used in similes?

Like, as

2 How is a metaphor different from a simile?

It speaks of a thing as if it actually is something else, without using 'like' or 'as'.

3 Explain how the sentence 'The train rocketed past' is more effective than 'The train rushed past like a rocket'?

The word 'rocketed' already conveys the idea of speed, so 'rushed' is unnecessary.

4 What technique is used here, and what is its effect?

The students rushed into the dining hall.

Metaphor. It suggests that a crowd of students moves quickly and all at once, like a rushing train.

5 What technique is used in this sentence, and what is its effect?

The pen needed the urge to keep writing.

Personification. It suggests that the pen has thoughts and feelings, like a person.

6 What is pathetic fallacy?

A figurative language technique that gives human emotion to something non-human (usually something in the natural world).

7 Is the following an example of pathetic fallacy or personification, and why?

The sun waits for no one.

This is personification because it makes time (an abstract concept) sound like a person that does not describe it as having any human emotion.
