

PW6000 Engine

Best Balance of Technology, Durability and Operating Economics for the Airbus A318

- Low cost of ownership
- Designed for short-haul operations
- Low noise and emissions
- 15-minute replacement for most LRU

Pratt & Whitney's PW6000 engine successfully entered into service powering the LAN Airlines A318 fleet in June 2007. Designed for demanding short-haul operations, the PW6000 engine incorporates advances in engine design and material and manufacturing technologies to set new standards for customer value. The PW6000 engine for the Airbus A318 delivers 22,000 to 24,000 pounds of thrust.

The PW6000 builds on proven technology from legacy Pratt & Whitney engine programs to deliver the lowest cost of ownership for 100-passenger aircraft operators. Pratt & Whitney has incorporated technological advances in the PW6000 engine that enable a significant reduction in parts count. Compared to other engines in its class, the PW6000 engine has fewer stages and 20 percent fewer airfoils, leading to a reduction in engine maintenance cost. The PW6000 engine's lower turbine temperature allows significantly higher EGT margin for longer time on-wing.
